Gardenscapes was a hidden object game in which the player runs a B&B hotel. According to VentureBeat, a mobile version was in development for more than four years and was released in 2016 as a combination of gameplay with an urban-building core. The plot is centered on a butler named Austin, who to rebuild the dilapidated building and garden.[2] To complete the tasks, the user must complete the levels and earn the required "stars." Gardenscapes allows players to choose decorations for clean areas of a massively covered garden as they level up. The main gameplay is complemented by mini-games where players must solve puzzles to save characters.[3][4] Playrix regularly releases seasonal updates, such as Christmas Collaterals.[5] In addition, in 2021, they launched the Yoga Season in partnership with the World Health Organization. The plot describes tips on how to keep healthy while self-isolating.[6][7][5] Commercial and Sequel To eliminate fruits, the player must match three of the same fruits vertically or horizontally. The players can use the Power Ups to facilitate their gameplay. After its release, Gardenscapes was named one of the top 10 free games for iPhone and iPad in 100 countries. The project was released not only on the App Store, where the first day it was downloaded more than a million times, but also on Google Play and Amazon Appstore. Gardenscapes has been named by Facebook its overall game of the year for 2016. As a result, developers have entered the top 20 mobile publishers in the world.[8][9] In 2019, Gardenscapes was named the fifth highest-grossing puzzle game, generating $1.5 billion in-app purchases. The total number of installed apps exceeded 213 million. An average revenue per installation was about $7, making it one of the leading game publishers. Google Play users accounted for 70% of Gardenscapes downloads and contributed 47% of total revenue.[10] During the COVID-19 pandemic, Gardenscapes had an audience of over 10 million active players per day.[6] Sensor Tower estimated that Gardenscapes earned almost 2 billion dollars. in 2021.[2][7] According to Statista, in May 2021, the game remained the most downloaded product of Playrix with over $461.41 million in total. The success of the original game led to a series of sequels, such as Gardenscapes 2. A year after the release of Gardenscapes in 2016, developers have also launched a similar project - hopescapes, in which the main character returns to his childhood home and tries to restore it. [12] [13] Critics since 2016 Playrix has managed an active marketing strategy. However, Facebook ads for Gardenscapes and Hopescapes were defined as misleading and "unrepresentative" in early 2020. The developers stated that the promoted images of the gameplay captured mini-games available every 20 levels. Therefore, most of the audience did not see it, stopping at the lower levels. The Advertising Standards Authority banned banners in October 2020 and warned Playrix about the representation of other campaigns.
